Answer each of the following questions.

1. What is thought trapping? Thought trapping is writing the first thing you think about a topic, then listing everything else you can, and finally trapping the thought by rewriting the first thing.

2. What is before-and-after writing? Before-and-after writing is writing what you already know before studying a subject, then afterward writing what you have learned.

3. Pick a topic you are currently studying and write a terse verse, a concrete poem, or a riddle about it.
(Answers will vary.)

4. Using the same topic or another one of your choosing, write two “what if” questions.
(Answers will vary.)

5. Create a pro-con chart to evaluate a topic that you are currently studying.
(Answers will vary.)
